THE PROBLEM

Generic budget apps don't speak Southeast Asian salary life.

Most apps treat money as a flat ledger. But here, life is shaped by fixed commitments — car loans, house financing, family transfers — and by local rituals like Zakat and Hari Raya. Whether your gaji lands weekly, monthly, or as a one-off, what matters is that every duit has a job before it disappears.

01

Commitments first

Car loans, house financing, family transfers — fixed bills always come before discretionary spending.

02

Local rituals matter

Zakat, Hari Raya, school fees and umrah savings don't fit into generic categories.

03

Any pay rhythm

Monthly gaji, weekly wages, or freelance drops — DuitPlan plans against the income you actually receive.

THE MENTAL MODEL

Three flows. One clear picture.

Every ringgit, dollar, and rupiah of your gaji has a job. DuitPlan models the way you actually think about it.

Envelopes

Spending categories — drained as you spend

Groceries, transport, eating out. Each envelope shows what's left, in real money.

Bank

Loan repayments — auto on payday

Car loan, house financing, credit card. Auto-deducted the moment your salary lands.

Vault

Long-term goals — friction-locked

Umrah, kids' school, emergency fund. Earmarked before you can spend it elsewhere.

FEATURE 01 · HARI TERIMA

Payday triggers everything.

On payday, DuitPlan greets you with a banner: "Hari Terima is today." One tap logs your gaji, settles every auto-debit, and refills your envelopes for the cycle.

- ✓ Salary detected and posted
- ✓ Auto-debits matched and reconciled
- ✓ Envelopes topped up for the month
- ✓ Streak counter ticks up

FEATURE 02 · BUDGETS

Drag your gaji into envelopes.

Pick up a chunk of your salary and drop it into a Bank repayment, an Envelope, or a Vault goal. See instantly what's left to allocate. No forms, no spreadsheets.
